

Weekly Economic Update for 2/19/2024

THE WEEK ON WALL STREET

Stocks fell last week as investors reacted to disappointing inflation updates and other economic reports that fell short of estimates.

Stocks Snap Winning Streak

Markets were quiet Monday but opened lower Tuesday in response to the January inflation report that showed higher-than-expected consumer prices. But stocks regained some momentum on Wednesday and rallied Thursday despite disappointing reports on both retail sales and industrial production for January.^{1,2}

News of higher-than-expected wholesale prices on Friday put investors back on edge and kept stocks from ending the week on a positive note. The weekly loss broke a five-week winning streak.³

Inflated Perspective

Consumer Price Index data was one of the big pieces of news driving markets last week, with January's numbers coming in at 3.1 percent compared to a year prior—cooler than December's 3.4 percent year-over-year gain but warmer than the 2.9 percent consensus. Jittery investors focused on the hotter-than-expected part.⁴

With the consumer report closely followed by disappointing inflation news on the producer level, attention quickly shifted to the Fed and what's next for interest rates. While the Fed has indicated short-term rates may trend lower in 2024, the January inflation reports support Fed Chair Powell's recent comments that the Fed is in no hurry to cut rates.⁴

TAX TIP

Taking a Side Gig? Here's How It May Affect Your Taxes

Taxpayers who work in the gig economy may benefit from a better understanding of how their work affects their taxes.

Here are some things taxpayers should know about the gig economy and taxes:

- Money earned through this work may be taxable.
- There are tax implications for the company providing the platform and the individual performing the services.

This income may be taxable even if the taxpayer providing the service doesn't receive a Form 1099-MISC, Form 1099-K, or Form W-2. This income may also be taxable if the activity is only part-time or side work or paid in cash.

HEALTHY LIVING TIP

Show Your Heart Some Love

February is American Heart Month. While genetics and family history are primary factors in disease development and survival, some lifestyle factors are associated with better heart health. However, make sure to discuss any medical concerns with your health care provider before beginning any dietary and fitness regimen. The following information is not a substitute for medical advice.

- Manage your blood pressure: Make sure to get your blood pressure checked regularly. Hypertension is often asymptomatic.
- Maintain a healthy weight: Being overweight or obese may increase disease risk.
- Eat well and exercise: These two activities are associated with a lower incidence of heart disease.
- Drink less alcohol and don't smoke: These habits are seen more frequently in heart disease patients.
- Sleep well and reduce stress: Lower cortisol levels may reduce your risk for heart disease.

While not all risk factors are controllable, some are. The list above is not comprehensive. Give your heart some love this month and talk to your doctor about the best ways to care for it.

WEEKLY RIDDLE

What can explode slowly, with no smoke or flame?

Last week's riddle: If a single-engine airplane taxied not onto a runway but onto an enormous conveyor belt whose speed precisely equaled that of the plane in the opposite direction, could the plane still manage to take off? Answer: Yes, eventually. A plane's wheels roll freely, and the thrust generated by the prop or jet engine will still be greater than drag, and the lift created by air flowing over the wing will still be greater than the aircraft's weight.
